FOR CONGRESSMEN

JOHN C. NELSON DINGEE, Jr.
Third District

CHARLES A. BOUTELLE

Republican Caucuses.

The Republican voters of Bangor are hurriedly summoned to meet at the polling place in the severs rooms on FRIDAY, June 12, 1892, at 7:30 A.M. to nominate their candidates for the State Convention to be held at Portland June 1st 1892, and to choose delegates to attend the Republican State Convention to be held at Duxbury on the 2d. The nomination of candidates for the County Convention is to be held at Duxbury on the 2d, and for the State Convention the 3d. The names of the candidates as may properly come before them, will be read at the meeting.

For the State Convention each ward is entitled to one delegate.

The delegates so chosen are required to meet at the Common Council Room at 10 A.M. on the same day, and to remain until the nomination of delegates to each of the said conventions.

For other information, see the Committee

N. F. LATOUR, Chairman

George M. FLETCHER, Secretary

Frigg, June 5, 1892.

A Blaine Day

The opening day of the Republican National Convention was essentially a Blaine day. The temporary chairman of the convention was selected by acclamation the choice falling upon Hon. J. Stort J. Russell, a prominent Blaine man. The vote in the National Committee for this officer shows that the Blaines have a considerable majority of that organization, and the fact that the supporters of the President did not contest the selection will, at this distance, indicate that they were not desirous of making a test vote at this stage of the proceedings notwithstanding the fact that they are loading the wires with all sorts of reports of their alleged strength in the convention.

An impression prevails that it is always customary to leave the selection of the temporary chairman to the National Committee without question on the part of the convention, but this is not the fact. In 1881 the convention selected its own temporary presiding officer by ballot, defeating the man selected by the committee. As the friends of the President had their own man for this position in the person of Stort J. Russell, the failure to contest the election of Mr. Russell outside the committee room seems to show a decided lack of faith in the figures they have given out as representing the strength of their candidate on the first ballot.

The presiding officer made an eloquent speech and every reference to Mr. Blaine was the signal for a storm of the wildest enthusiasm. It is a remarkable fact that the Blaines are not giving out any figures. They leave that sort of thing to the supporters of the President, but in the meantime they are making a vigorous canvass of the delegates and with good result. The Blaine strength will increase every day, but the adjournment was a step in favor of the popular candidate. The Harrison men have little opportunity to look for new converts, their time being chiefly occupied in trying to prevent a stampede among their forces. In a careful review of the situation George Alfred Boutelle, the well known journalist, telegraph the Boston Advertiser as follows:The Harrison men have nothing to do at Washington for a week, and are ready for the attack. They are in the lead, and the Blaine men are hardly two weeks off.

Every man working for the President has in view a reward in the year. His friends are not sure what Blaine can promise, only an arrangement.

Yet the contest will be close.

The Harrison men figure up about 400 votes for Blaine and the remainder for Harrison, but changes have since been made that drive Blaine's vote up near 500.

If no other person is to be voted for than these two the first ballot may decide the issue.

But Blaine should have so promptly sprung to an equality with Harrison is surprising in view of the unequal basis of his support.

He announced some time ago that his men would not be presented and no qualification has been made of this except his resignation Saturday last.

The day indicates how rapidly the Harrison movement has grown in spite of the fact that he has all this time refused to allow his friends to make any canvass in his behalf. It is a splendid testimonial of the great and popular demand for his nomination. The people want to see Mr. Blaine President of the United States and this sentiment finds expression in the earnest manner in which their representatives are rallying to his support in the Maine political convention.

Democratic State Convention

The Democratic State Convention will meet in this city to-day. There will doubtless be a good attendance as the turnout last evening brought a large number of delegates.

There is a great deal of uncertainty as to the result and the leaders of the party were very conservative in their statements after the meeting of the State Committee.

The district convention yesterday aroused an angry feeling that is liable to make itself felt in the deliberative body.

Protests have been filed against the selection of the candidate for Congress and the election of Mr. Bass as a delegate to the National Convention.

The selection of a candidate for Governor is not a matter of much significance and the convention will confer the empty honor upon almost any person who is ready to offer himself for the sacrifice.

The contest, if any, will probably come on adoption of the platform.

An effort will be made to again insert the license plank, and this movement is liable to precipitate a very severe discussion.

Many of the members of the party are strongly opposed to the license plank as they were two years ago, and others express a determination to fight it for the reason that it is the creature of Mr. Bass who aroused their wrath by his performance yesterday.

Fourth District Convention.

The Democrats of the Fourth District held their convention in this city yesterday and had a lively old time. A mad set of men, though the supporters of Mr. Leavitt would be hard to find. They made no pretense of disgracing their feelings, but on the other hand openly charged that their candidate was defrauded by fraud. When the ballot was counted it was found that some fifty more votes than there were delegates had been dropped into the hats, and the Leavitt men declared that in order to make the count right a lot of ballots were thrown out, the greater majority of such ballots being taken from the Leavitt vote. The Leavitt men also insist that they had a clear majority of the convention, that the bonus which was cast for the supporters of the successful candidate and that in order to cover their tracks another ballot was necessary, hence enough election returns were taken out to carry the Leavitt men for Mr. Powers.

This was the kind of talk I heard
